

Reminders

- Your first online homework using WebAssign (WAH §2.1) is due Friday, September 7. Please visit the course web site for instructions on starting to use WebAssign.
- Your first written homework assignment (WRH 1) is due on Monday, September 10 at the beginning of class. Again, see the course web site for the assigned problems.

Frequently Asked Questions

- Q: When will I see my ALEKS homework grade and quiz grade in Blackboard?
A: These grades should appear on Blackboard by Friday afternoon. If you believe the grades are incorrect, you should contact David Maxwell (damaxwell@alaska.edu)
- Q: My proctored ALEKS assessment score was low. Will I get dropped from the class?
A: No. If you have already met one of the UAF prerequisites for Calculus I, you will not be dropped for lack of prerequisite skills. However, the standard for “calculus readiness” is a score of 78 or higher on this proctored test, and your instructor may wish to contact you if they are concerned about your math placement.
If you scored below 78, there are steps that you can consider taking.
 - A typical student is expected to spend about 10 hours per week on calculus outside of class. You may want to set aside in your schedule more time than that.
 - You continue to have access to the ALEKS learning module, which can provide a structured way to continue to learn past material.
 - If you are worried about not being successful in calculus, the math department has made it easy for you to transfer into pre-calculus, even for a little bit of time past the Friday, September 7 add/drop deadline. Please talk to your instructor for details.
- Q: Are we done with ALEKS now or will I need to keep using it?
A: We will not formally use ALEKS for the remainder of the class. However, you continue to have access to the ALEKS Calculus I module for 6 months and you may find it useful to use the learning module to strengthen your prerequisite skills.